Schoolhouse on the move

DUBLIN — With nary a grunt or creak, the Old Murray Schoolhouse was moved from its 119 - year old resting place on Dublin Road to a permanent location next to Old St. Raymond's Church on Donlon Road yesterday.

Movers wasted no time in raising the old building from its foundation and placing it on a trailer to begin the one-mile trek along Foothill Road and over Interstate 580.

As the diesel truck smoked and strained, the larger half of the structure was pulled and yanked to its new surroundings in less than an hour. After a brief unloading process, the caravan of vehicles preceding and following the flatbed mover again went back to the ancient schoolyard site.

As several neighbors stopped by to see the old schoolhouse at its new location and reminisce of better times, the movers again appeared over the horizon and peaked at the crest of the overpass with its second and final installment — the smaller half of the structure.

Motorists slowed and

City, County to buy rights-of-way

Alameda County Bureau

OAKLAND — An agreement reached yesterday between the board of supervisors and City of Livermore to purchase rights-of-way for the eventual completion of State Route 84 from Stanley Boulevard to I-580 will not guarantee completion of that downtown by-

While the supervisors joined Livermore in an agreement to purchase 19.3 acres as a prelude to realigning Route 84 and thus "punching through" Isabel Avenue, the state "today is not in a posi-tion to finish" that route, according to county director of public works Herb Crowle.

The purchase agreement whereby Livermore will pay an estimated $55,000 and the county $45,000, is "no guarantee, but protects the transportation corridor," Crowle said. It would preclude development of the property now

The state's Highway Commission repeatedly has said there are no available funds for new highway projects they recently announced plans to drop major improvements to the west end of Route 84 near Newark and Fremont — but Crowle sees "several options in the future

A combination of federal, state and local funding could be found, or the city and county could join in financing the project through federal

That cloverleaf now ends at a private road used by two gravel firms to haul sand and gravel from their pits to I-580. Other firms denied access to the road must travel through one of the two towns.

Valley supervisorial representative John Murphy last month instructed the public works department to prepare a feasability study and cost estimate on completion of Isabel Avenue to Airway Boulevard and the freeway.

Crowle said, "I won't make any statement" on that study until it's completed, however. It should be ready "in the next few months," he added. - by Ron Rodriguez

Tennis lease gets nod

PLEASANTON — The city council approved city-leased indoor tennis courts at the Alameda County Fairgrounds Monday night on a 3-2 vote.

Council members Joyce LeClaire, Roger McLain and William Herlihy voted for the lease and Robert Philcox and Ed Kinney against it.

The park and recreation commission last week also split 3-2 on the tennis court issue, but the verdict went against leasing the courts. The commission has advisory powers only on such ques-

Kinney opposed the lease because he felt it would provide city-subsidized competition to privately-run tennis courts, especially the new indoor courts at Tennis Town. Taxpayers should run such endeavors only if the private sector can't do it, said Kin-

County Fair Director Dee Wilson of Pleasanton told Kinney, who is a pharmaceutical salesman, that his reasoning was similar to telling a public hospital he couldn't sell pharmaceuticals to public hospitals, but only to private hospitals. The county will run the courts anyway and Pleasanton, which is short at least 14 tennis courts. should take advantage of the lease offer, said Wilson. The "private enterprise" argument didn't bother Philcox but the park and recreation's 3-2 rejection of the idea did bother him. "They felt that the courts won't be supported financially, that the necessary demand for them is not here," said Philcox.

LeClaire said the city is short of tennis courts and many players don't have the funds or time to justify joining a private club. Basically the courts won't compete against Tennis Town, she said. Herlihy agreed, adding that recreation superintendent Robert Caparusso assured him that the city operation would not include a pro shop, babysitting ser-- by Ron Rodriguez vices, or other peripheral business activities. McLain thought it "was time we got something for our county tax money." The indoor courts will provide the city court player with an environment where he or she won't have to contend against "110 degree heat, rain, or passing gravel trucks.'

The city will lease the courts beginning Friday until the end of the year by splitting overhead expenses evenly with the county fair. After January 1 the city will pay $2,400 per month at the end of each month until the end of May when the lease expires. The city and fair directors will look at the arrangment then and see if they want to

Caparusso is optimistic that the courts will pay their own way. Since the facility is on county property, it will be open to all valley county residents and the use by Dublin and Livermore residents will help the city make the nut, he

The four courts in the Young California building on the fairgrounds will be open from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. seven days a week beginning Friday. Court fee will be $4 for an hour and 15 minute period. There will be signups from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. December 15 for tennis lessons. Fees are $18 for eight one-hour lessons for adults, and $12 for youths 18 and under.

Back in the small valley town where Braun grew up, everyone knew everyone else, they cared about other people or at least they always had an eye on you and you couldn't get away with anything, said Braun. "If I got into any mischief, my parents knew about it by the time I got home. Your neighbors gave you a spanking if they saw you do something wrong, and you got another one when you got home. Now you can walk a block from your home and not know anyone," said Braun.

Some voters have called for a moratorium on building new prisons because the system has not worked. Braun agrees prisons have not worked well and thinks a brief moratorium would not hurt things. since the state is paroling more convicts these days. But you can't run away from the fact that there are hard, violent criminals who will kill and rape people if they are let loose on society, said Braun. Until something better is found, California will need its prisons, he said. by Ron McNicoll

Bob Braun

'State prisons fail at rehabilitation' LIVERMORE - California's prisons ter prisons, give me a better grade of prisdon't rehabilitate, a San Quentin prison psychologist told the Livermore Unitarian Fellowship Sunday.

Livermore resident Bob Braun, a San Quentin staffer for the past three years, said the state's prisons have failed in their announced mission to rehabilitate people.

"There are two attitudes toward prison. One is the old one where a man walks in, does his five years of time and walks out. Later we became committed to offering rehabilitation to every single prisoner. Now the pendulum seems to be swinging the other way again," said Braun.

If Braun had his way, he would try to find a system of screening incoming prisoners so officials could spot those most likely to take advantage of education and job training. Braun would spend the budget on them and forget about the convicts who would show no results.

It's not surprising there are few good results from the prison system, said Braun. "One governor once said, if you want bet-oner," said Braun. At San Quentin, the average convict reads at the third grade level, dropped out of high school in the tenth grade. and started seeing judges as a youth.

The inmate at San Quentin finds himself in a microcosm of the outside world, said Braun. The convicts have their own laws and enforce them. There were 87 stabbings and 12 murders in the prison last year. The corrections administration has managed to bring the number of stabbings down to 50 so far this year, primarily by paroling a high number of inmates. The prison population has dropped from 2,400 to 1,800 since last March because of a liberalization of the parole program.

The gangs are the biggest fact of life facing the Quentin inmate. The Mexican Mafia, the Black Guerilla Family, the Arvan Brotherhood, all have their claims, under penalty of death, on their members, and according to Braun they all vie for their share of the narcotics and sex traffic in the prison. Narcotics are smuggled in by visitors, said Braun. Sex is homosexual and the victimized males are peddled as sex objects, Braun stated.

The convicts have been failures in schools and in normal social situations. In prison they are even afraid to get into therapy, said Braun. They think they will fail in therapy and unless they need it to look good for their parole board, it is very difficult to convince anyone to get into therapy.

Braun helps a variety of people in his practice and especially likes his his work with schizophrenics, whom psychologists consider the most difficult mental patients to treat. "After five or six months they show real progress, more than other prisoners I deal with. After awhile they become 'normal' and the criminal in them begins to show,' said Braun. The crime rate is rising 18 percent per year, a statistic which Braun brought ly raped last year and the rapist is still at

Jordan plans to pursue campaign

PLEASANTON — Jim Jordan has no plans to scrap his contemplated city council campaign just because the city council has dissolved the redevelopment agency

Jordan, co-chairman of Citizens Against Redevelopment, said the council may have thought it killed redevelopment as a campaign issue in the election next March, but redevelopment was never the real issue

"The real issue, which the council showed again Monday night, is the lack of leadership on the council," said Jordan. "Four out of five council members said they loved the agency, but they didn't have the courage of their convictions to put it to a vote. They did the right action, but for the wrong reason. They didn't kill the agency because the people wanted it killed but because they wanted it to go away as an issue

Citizens Against Redevelopment will continue to meet, probably on a bi-weekly basis, to make constructive suggestions to the council about how it can finance various capital improvement projects, said Jordan.

Thanksgiving dinner

Cook your bird in style and safely

If you are cooking Thanksgiving dinner for the first time, or even if you are a seasoned cook, you might have some important questions -For example, is it safe to roast a stuffed turkey at 200 degrees overnight? Is it dangerous to stuff a turkey hours before roasting? Is it safe to freeze leftover turkey, gravy, and stuffing after a dinner?

"Holiday dinners may sometimes result in some people becoming ill, and the blame is usually placed on 'eating too much' when it may have been food poisoning," says Dr. Bryant, food science specialist at the University of California.

'Why? Because the cook, confronted by large amounts of food and not enough space in the refrigerator, ignores the basic principles of food safety and allows foods to be left too long at room temperature. This creates a favorable climate for food poisoning

His advice? Keep foods hot - 140 degrees, and cold foods cold - 40 degrees. The danger zone is in between.

Q. IS IT DANGEROUS TO STUFF A TURKEY HOURS BEFORE ROASTING?

A. Yes, it is. Bacteria that cause food poisoning may be transferred from hands, uten- them but follow these precausils, cutting board, or counter top to the turkey or dressing. When conditions are right, these bacteria multiply and Turkey may also be frozen in slices (put wax paper between slices for easy separation later.) Wrap in freezer foil. Thin plastic bags are not suitable. Slices will keep up to two months at zero degrees. They will keep (safely) longer but the quality will not be as good. Dressing may be frozen wrapped in freezer foil or in rigid containers. Place casserole in pan with about one inch hot water. Cover casserole loosely with foil. Heat in preheated oven, 400 degrees, until hot.

Q. IS IT SAFE TO ROAST A STUFFED TURKEY AT 200 DEGREES OVERNIGHT?

A. It is not safe. At that temperature it would take too long for the inside of the turkey and the dressing to reach high enough temperatures to kill any harmful bacteria that cause food poisoning. To be safe from this hazard, roast the turkey at 325 degrees in a preheated oven to an internal temperature of 185 degrees

These temperatures are high enough to kill harmful bacteria and prevent the toxin for-Q. IS IT SAFE TO PARTIAL-

LY ROAST A TURKEY, COOL AND REFRIGERATE AND FINISH ROASTING IT THE NEXT DAY?

A. No, it is not safe. Never partially roast a turkey and finish cooking later. Harmful bacteria that cause food poisoning can survive in partially-cooked poultry and some produce toxins which will cause persons eating the turkey to become ill. Some toxins are not destroyed by cooking.

Q. WHAT IS THE SAFEST WAY TO THAW A FROZEN TURKEY IF YOU HAVE FORGOTTEN TO REMOVE IT FROM THE FREEZER AND PLACE IT IN THE RE-FRIGERATOR SEVERAL DAYS BEFORE COOKING?

A. There are three ways to thaw a frozen unstuffed raw turkey — in the refrigerator, at room temperature and in cold water at room temperature. The first method is best: the other two should be used only as secondary methods Never thaw a frozen, stuffed bird before cooking.

To thaw at room temperature, leave the turkey in the original wrap, place it in a double paper bag or wrap in several thicknesses of paper. Close the bag with paper clips or staple it shut. Piace on a tray for easy handling and to catch drippings. Thaw at 70 degrees or thereabouts. When thawed sufficiently to do so, remove bag of giblets from cavity. These can be cooked for gravy-making.

A turkey of 4 to 12 pounds will thaw at room temperature in 12 to 15 hours. A turkey of 12 to 24 pounds will thaw at room temperature in 16 to 20

To thaw a turkey in cold water, leave turkey in original wrap. Immerse in cold water, change water frequently to speed thawing. Thaw poultry until it is pliable. Using a turkey of 4 to 12 pounds will thaw in 4 to 6 hours; a turkey of 12 to 20 pounds will thaw in 6 to 8 hours; and a turkey of 20 to 24 pounds will thaw in 8 to 12

Once you see how plants can make a room come to life, you'll wonder how you ever got along without them. Plants have always been around, but decorating with plants is something different. It means giving plants the same status you would give furniture, a painting or any other component of a well-planned room.

To decorate with plants, you don't have to be a horticulturist - just utilize the consulting service available at my plant shop and share acquired knowledge about the placement and care of houseplants. A recent article in Lifestyle about the home of Pat and Ralph Linck of Pleasanton demonstrated the result of this consulting service. I'm proud of my innovative idea, so may I toot my own horn a bit? After visiting my customer's home, checking light exposures, color schemes, furniture placement, taste in decor and plant likes and dislikes, I prepare a plan. This guide takes into consideration the recommended plants, sizes and a price estimate for variously-sized specimens. The second visit usually has me placing some of the desired plants in the home, demonstrating the best way to furnish a room "naturally.

When the customer has made final decisions on the plants to be used, cards are filled out for each one regarding watering, feeding, pinching, dormancy and other requirement for keeping the individual plant happy and healthy.

This Thanksgiving I have much to be thankful for good friends who are special customers, and good customers who are special friends, a fun column and all you who read "Plant Talk" and ask those important questions. Happy Thanksgiving from

Redevelopment was a worthy test

Pleasanton's first redevelopment venture was a bold move, launched it would seem before its time. Few will argue that the city's initial presentation was misguided, resulting in a hard core of opposition that was unnecessary, and perhaps not even germane.

But we reject the contention that the council itself was acting "sneakily" when it struggled to bring that plan to the widest possible public view.

Perhaps it was that initial bungling by the staff, the multi-million dollar magnitude of that first plan, or the stupid pitch that "it's not going to cost you tax-payers a cent" which finally killed off redevelopment. It no longer matters.

The council wisely saw that it was "dividing the community" with a venture that was supposed to help move our city forward, not tear it apart. The move to shelve that entire venture is wise and given a politician's pride of authorship — courageous.

Now we shall see if the opponents show us similar courage. In all of those oral arguments, in a score of letters and 50 telephone calls just to this office, those who saw no good whatsoever in the redevelopment approach to "revitalization of Pleasanton's core area" maintained "there are much better ways to achieve those same goals.

In the weeks ahead, including the campaign period leading to next March's elections for three members to the city council, it will be interesting to see who comes forward with what bold plan to sustain and revitalize this community's century-old core area.

Redevelopment was but one means to that end What really counts is the pride of a people in their city, and our determination to do something for ourselves, before they have to call in the federal

The farm and the city

Pillar of his community

Editor, The Times:

November 21-27 has been designated by the President as National Farm-City Week. The purpose is to bring about better understanding between rural and urban people. As members of the Alameda County Cowbelles, we are joining other agriculture — industry groups in a nationwide effort to help urban Americans more fully understand the importance of agriculture. The two groups are interdependent.

Agriculture, the nation's largest industry, employs four out of ten non-farm workers. And in the beef industry segment alone, every dollar of cattle sales directly generates an additional $5-6 of business activity in the farm supply and food businesses. One out of every five jobs in private business is in agriculture and agribusiness.

Farmers pump billions of dollars into the economy each year, and create nearly twenty per cent of the market for basic industries. American farmers pay over $2.7 billion dolper year in real estate taxes, and pay $2.5 billion per year in federal and state income taxes.

Americans still spend only 15 per cent of

Prices received by cattlemen are strictly related to supply and demand. The cattle business is not a margin-added business, where margins are added to the cost of materials, like conventional manufacturing or merchandising business. Nor are cattlemen able to control the total supply of the products. The supplies of beef produced and marketed vary in response to changes in production costs and in cattle prices.

This program should have a double prupose. First, farmers should be made more aware of the business they are in (consumer-products), and what people in farm and non-farm production and marketing are doing to build and maintain American Agriculture as the largest industry in the nation today. Second, urban Americans should have a better understanding of how their lives and often their jobs are touched by agriculture

Saint Squeaky

Editor, The Times: In the year 1431, a 19-year-old girl named Joan of Arc was found guilty of sorcery, blasphemous pride and cutting her hair and dressing like a man, was burnt at the stake by the inquisition in France. In 1920 she was canonized as a saint by the Catholic church. It was not until this year that an American was designated a saint. Mother Elizabeth was recently canonized by Pope Paul VI in Vatican City

It is high time, I think, to add more American women to the roster of saints. I hereby propose the names of Patty Hearst and Squeaky Fromme. I'm unencumbered with any exact knowledge of the principles and practices of hagiology, but I'd like to offer these credentials on behalf of these young

Patty Hearst, at the same age, has been charged with as many grave offenses as was Saint Joan when she was burned. For a miracle, she eluded a full scale search of the highest law enforcing agency in the nation for 17 months. Or is that simply a routine performance? If for her alleged misdeeds she is punished severely enough, she could be Saint Patty in the year 2464.

Squeaky Fromme has had a later start; the charges against her are few in number, but though the gun she carried was not loaded, it was aimed at an exceptionally august personage, which should boost her future standing. I can't think of any miracle she has performed, and it could be that I just like the sound of a Saint Squeaky. Besides, isn't it possible that the deity she worships so fervently, Charles Manson, could be recognized 500 years from now as the only true God?

Saint Patty and Saint Squeaky — fetching and spiritistic names both!

BART's mistakes

Editor, The Times:

Your editorial "The $2 billion transit mistake" makes many valid points. I cannot agree, however, with its conclusion

2.5 million people live in our three BART counties (Alameda, San Francisco, and Contra Costa). Our voters in 1962 bonded themselves for $792 million to build the BART system ... With some half billion dollars in other local funds (e.g., Bay Bridge tolls) and one-third billion in federal funds, we now have a transit property costing over $1.6 billion. Over $640 for every man, women and child in our three counties

You'd really junk ("wind down") BART? No matter what we do, we'll be paying for the bonds until 1999. BART's safety record is phenomenal - well over 800,000,000 passenger miles in three years of operation without a serious passenger injury. We may have problems, but BART riders whiz by freeway tie-ups and have no city-core parking prob-lems. BART unifies the Bay Area, lets people get to work, school, shop and offices via fast, comfortable, safe, dependable and smog-free transit.

I'm not ready to junk BART. The taxpayers have too much invested. BART potential is too great. When the voters toss out the greedy and those who condone their flings, we can — and will — tame the bureaucracy and bring costs under control.

As for BART rail to the Valley, the final report will wind up years of study. It won't please everyone (myself included), but a route has been adopted and must be protected. Then we must answer the question: Do we want a BART rail line, with the growth that it would bring? I have serious doubts.

bit old now and maybe down at the heels, but In reference to your cartoon on the editorial I haven't felt so young myself, lately. The creative solution would be to keep anyone page in Wednesday's paper, why are you under 65 years old out of downtown Pleasancomparing apples with oranges or in your ton. People who grew up with that architeccase guns with automobiles?

But since you are making a comparison, it makes about as much sense to confiscate and melt down an automobile because its driver was drunk as it does to do the same to a gun because it was misused. Too few people realize that the ownership of firearms is a RIGHT guaranteed by the Constitution and that it will take a Constitutional Amendment to change this right, and the people are not willing to do this.

Why don't you print something on the positive side of this issue? Newspeople should be defending this right just as they should free speech and freedom of the press, because they go hand in hand. Our Founding Fathers in their infinite wisdom realized this because they saw the value of it first hand.

During our bi-centennial would be a good time to write about the part firearms have played in winning our independence and keeping us a free nation.

Even in a nuclear age, it is the infantryman with rifle and sidearm who fights the war and maintains the peace.

In what country has gun control worked?

The answer of course is - none! If there was gun control tomorrow, who would be punished? I'll venture to say the criminal would plea bargin armed robbery to simple assult, but the citizen who protected himself with an unregistered gun and who never had so much as a traffic ticket against him throughout his life would get the book thrown at him. It will be a sad day in this country when they make a house to house search and tell each occupant that they are there to seize all firearms. That will be the day when we can say that we are no longer free.

Editor, The Times:

On behalf of the Livermore Soccer Club, we would like to express our thanks to the Livermore community for the support extended our fall fund raising campaign. Your generous support will provide three new Soccer fields, to be used by the youth of the area next

The success of the project resulted from efforts of the soccer players, and generosity extended by community members in the prize raffle. Special thanks are due the local merchants who helped with incentive awards and raffle prizes. These included Atom Appliance, Emperor's Garden, Granada Bow, J. The three top salesmen awards were presented to Soccer players Troy Searcy, Jerry Horgan and Greg Mullins, who received a dirt bike, portable television set and tape recorder, respectively. In the prize Raffle held at The Barn Nov. 9: Roland Sarchett won a side of beef, Roberta Clifton won the television set, $50 Alpha Beta certificates were won by Barry Howard and N. CARD's stand

Editor, The Times:

Nowwhere in the news media has there been any mention of CARD's stand or that over 1500 of the circulars which CARD passed out in Pleasanton asking the City Council to dissolve the Pleasanton Redevelopment Agency, have been returned to City Hall ... the city council has not seen fit to recognize the issue although Mayor Kinney claimed at the Nov. 11th Public Meeting, he had only 30 proponents for the Redevelopment Plan. CARD feels Pleasanton does not need an AGENCY to siphon off money that could be better spent for one of the six projects listed in the revised Redevelopment Plan. (Rumored estimates of city funds already spent by the council acting as the Redevelopment Agency run to the tons of thousands of dollars. . .

For the record, Card Does Not Oppose Any Of The Projects In The Revised Redevelopment Plan, in fact CARD would like to see even more projects included. But the list of priorities should start with the West Las Positas overcrossing as promised by the resolution of the city council last May. CARD feels that other sources of funding are available for this project besides tax increment. There is strong feeling that a city bond issue would pass at the next election for the purpose of funding this overcrossing. Letters to Sacramento testifying to the children using the ditch or running across the Freeway to get to Foothill High would be a starter . . . Arroyo Parkway and Bernal realignment should have higher priorities as they will do more to alleviate downtown traffic than Peters Str. (An ongoing search of titles reveals that landgrabbers have recently bought up old residential properties that will adjoin Peters Str. and they stand to reap the profits when this street goes thru.

CARD is also interested in cutting down on city expenditures and consultants fees are a prime target. With all the "Brain-Trust" available from Pleasanton residents it would seem there ought to be input enough to study and work out a solution to all of our problems. Faye L. Sanders Pleasanton

It is not that I mind laying out in excess of $300 for just one coat. ("You can buy a whole set of Arnold Palmer woods for no more than that!" I exclaim. Wrong answer.) What really frazzles the nerves is the repeated invasions of The City before the coat monster is finally conquered. I swear we have tried on every blessed coat west of the Bay. Some three times.

Not Scrooge, but Fezziwig is the central character around whom revolves the great Dickens Christmas Fair, in progress now near the produce market in San Francisbo.

Believe me, if the produce market, with its sterile warehouses and functional loading platforms has lost some if not all of its charm since it thrived on Front Street a score or more years ago, a little magic returns to the area each holiday season when, for a half dozen weekends from November until Christmas, Ron and Phyllis Patterson, with the inevitable Art Blum, recreate as best they can the era during which Charles John Huffam Dickens ruled London's cultural society.

It is fitting, I think, that Fezziwig rather than Scrooge would be a central, if not the central character, in a production which portrays the happy times of Christ-

He was a far cry from the sour faced scoundrel who didn't care a hang whether Ben Cratchit and his family had a merry Christmas, whether Tiny Tim lived or died and in fact was willing to fire Ben on Christmas Eve. The jolly Fezziwig with his eyes twinkling behind square spectacles, vest pulled tight over a well rounded stomach and face flushed and smiling with the warmth of well being, is far more qualified to lead the quadrilles at the ballroom in the warehouse which bears his name. Some of you out there must remember Joann. There is not much in the valley she has not done at one time or another. I knew her first as a reporter for the Pleasanton

Times, a writer for the tri-weekly canary cage liner on Livermore's First Street and as woman's editor on the Livermore Branch of the Hayward Daily Review.

That, my friends, is really going all the way around the block, but for Joann it was just getting started. Only God and Joann know where she has been from then until now, but she popped up from nowhere Saturday afternoon, separating herself from the mob at the entrance to the Dickens Fair and telling me how nice it

She was working for Art Blum, of course, that busy San Francisco advertising and flack man whose empire stretches from the Las Positas Valley and Round Hill to the sunny slopes and ravines of Black Point and perhaps even farther.

We walked through the streets of London, the recreated Streets of Christmas Past, sipped the mulled wine, the ale and hot buttered rum, listened to a ruddy faced, broad beamed laddie sing about how wonderful it was to be an Englishman, took part in an elocution lesson, watched a weired game of blind man's bluff and eventually met Fezziwig.

All the time, because the fair was in Fezziwig's warehouse, the ball room Fezziwig's ball room and Fezziwig himself such a dominant character, we had asked each other, "Who the hell is Fezziwig?"

All afternoon long he sat tantalizingly on our tongues, lingered at length in our subconscious, but did not quite make it to any of our memories.

Which is why on Monday morning, having decided the fair was a lot of fun and far superior to the Renaissance Faire which draws throngs each summer near Black Point, I called Joann and asked the question. "Who the hell is Fezziwig?"

"He's in the Christmas Carol, I'm sure," she replied. "But I'll check so there'll be no mistake and call you back.' Five minutes later Fezziwig himself was on the horn.

The once and future champ?

Political expression and the Olympic ideal have been decreed oil-and-water status since that Mexico City afternoon in 1968 when Tommy Smith and John Carlos defiantly thrust black-gloved fists into the sky.

Almost over-shadowed by that outburst, however, was George Foreman's equally political flag waving demonstration in the Olympic boxing arena.

It's ironic that Foreman soared into public focus with the kind of expression being denounced today by Olympic supporters.

George and the rebellious sprint tandem of Smith and Carlos displayed courage in making their symbolic statements. All three were villified later by segments of the populous. Of course Foreman still prospers by his act of spontaneous patriotism. But remember the backdrop for his display.

It was 1968, the age of Vietnam and racial un-rest. A lot of kids wore the flag on the seat of their pants. To many, that was all the glorification it deserved.

Foreman's gesture was similarly an act of defi-ance, a challenge to the dissenters.

At college campuses they asked George; "Do you still wave the flag when you watch Vietnam on televison? Do you see red, white and blue when you return to that grim Houston ghetto that once was home?"

"Yes I do," replied

GEORGE FOREMAN It may have been just another publicity gambit. But if Foreman was being doubted on the campus, he was becoming a folk hero in the American heartland

They scopped clamoring for a "White Hope" because George was simply boxing's hope. None of Ali's brashness, none of Liston's badness. Foreman was the American dream, out - Lincolning Honest Abe. He had been a teenage ghetto hustler skating down a Foreman moved to Livermore, expressing his love for the sylvan pleasures he knew in those Pleasanton Job Corps days. He offended neighbors, however, by beating up a girl friend, the daughter of a well known local counselor.

Then followed the boxing travesties, Foreman's loss to Ali, the summary dismissal of popular manager Dick Sadler, and the ill-advised exhibition in Toronto.

By the summer of this year, George had hit the bottom. He had no guiding organization, and subsequently, no fights. Why Ali became the people's champ, George languished. He groused about his title loss, saying that Ali people drugged his food prior to the fight. To this day

He was becoming a lamentable, if not forgettable figure in the heavyweight scheme of things.

But on July 30 Foreman opened his training center in a sleepy Livermore shopping center. Rev.Cecil Williams, the black man's toast master general, helped celebrate the occasion. Other celebrities like Jim Brown were on hand to assure the townfolk that indeed, George would regain his title. In the next three weeks, Livermore youngsters and their dogs crowded into Foreman's gym. They watched while the one-time champ trained alone, between those frenzied hours when he had to match-make for himself.

Then, suddenly, he disappeared for weeks. The sign on the gym door said; "Will announce our return." Well George never announced it. But he returned. With promoter Jerry Perenchio, and manager Gil Clancy. Now Foreman is in business. Though he has trained with the veteran Clancy for only three weeks, he will fight tonight in the Catskill Mountains, against Jody Ballard of Texas. It is a tuneup for George, and he will turn over his earnings to the U.S. Olympic fund. "But it is not an exhi-

HOW THE PRETZEL KNOTTER FOUND WORK

Giupetto, the world-famous pretzel knotter who for years had knotted pretzels for Billie Sims' Hand-Knotted Pretzel Co., was forced into retirement when Billie decided to hire a troupe of traveling Hungarian pretzel knotters (a family who wished to settle in the United States and give up touring). Giupetto found he needed a job. But work was hard to come by for a former pretzel knotter. After months of trudging with his resume from one firm to another, Giupetto was about to give up when a friend

(a retired Hippopatamus trainer) said "Giupetto, why don't you look in the Valley/Pleasanton Times Want-Ads for a job." Having tried every thing else, Giupetto opened the paper, and Voila!, there it was: "WANTED, former pretzel knotter. To work with midget wrestlers." Needless to say, Giupetto got the job. MERLE DANIELS finally got the pictures back from his hunting trip into the high country in Utah. Those pictures showed a big mulie with horns over 24 inches high; four on one side and five points on the other.

Merle figures that buck was at least 11 years old, and had spent those years just getting fat! The critter dressed out at over 230 pounds, and proved to be really

It was so dry there in Utah this year that the bark on the Quaking aspens squeaked whenever there was the slightest breeze, Merle reported. Having such a good hunting area, he says he's going to return there next

KEN SURRHYNE says this is the best year ever for his out of state hunting. He came back with a big fat three-pointer that tipped the scales at 200-plus pounds. "I sure worked hard for that critter," Ken recalls.

"But the roasts that we have had have been super." Ken has been hunting in Montana for the last seven years. Here's to another good seven years, Ken!

DOVE SEASON opened again on Saturday and reports range from zero birds to limits. Some areas were fogged in; in some areas, the birds seemed really wild. It all depends on where one happens to be when those little gray speedsters come zipping over.

OF THE 13.5 million acres preserved for migratory bird habitat in the U.S., 8.25 million acres (61 per cent) are preserved as a direct result of hunting-oriented programs, according to a recent publication from the Agricultural Extension Service, University of Califor-

This fact sums up the critical role that America's duck and goose hunters play in the conservation of both waterfowl and a host of other wetland species.

Of these 8.25 million hunter-financed acres, 5.2 million acres are owned or controlled by waterfowl hunting clubs. These private wetland and marsh areas are not only managed to provide prime waterfowl habitat; they are also kept out of the hands of those who would drain, dredge or "develop" these irreplaceable natural habi-

Last year, for example, a group of South Carolina duck hunters donated their 25,000-acre coastal tract to a land conservation agency. Much sought after by commercial interests, this $20 million piece of real estate will now remain as part of the nation's wildlife heritage.

The private efforts of waterfowlers have also been instrumental in preserving Canadian breeding grounds, where more than 70 per cent of all waterfowl originate. In its 38-year history, Ducks Unlimited, an organization supported largely by U.S waterfowlers, has raised more than $35 million to create drought- and flood-proof habitat covering 2,000,000 water acres and encompassing 11,000 miles of shoreline on 1,200 projects across Waterfowl hunters also make significant contributions to federal and state habitat programs.

Since 1934, all waterfowl hunters 16 years of age or older have been required to purchase an annual Federal Migratory Bird Hunting Stamp, commonly called a duck stamp. Revenue from duck stamp sales is now about $11 million annually and, to date, this program has collected over $153 million for the acquisition of 2,000,000 acres of waterfowl production habitat and National Wildlife Refuge lands.

Additionally, the monies expended on sporting arms and ammunition include an 11 per cent tax which is earmarked for state wildlife restoration programs, including acquisition and development of migratory bird habitat.

Since this tax was imposed in 1939, over $518,040,000 have been collected providing the Federal Aid in Wildlife Restoration Program with funds for land acquisition of 1,050,000 acres by the states.

Conservationists agree that the key to wildlife population is proper habitat. And in the case of waterfowl habitat, the facts are clear. No other group has done, and is continuing to do more to preserve and enhance the native environment of migratory birds than America's waterfowl hunters.

THE CALIFORNIA Department of Fish and Game received its first shipment of a Florida strain of bluegill this year, reports Lewis Nelson, Jr. and Dale A. Wade, Extension Wildlife Specialists.

After inspection for diseases and parasites, the fish were stocked in Lake Perris, Riverside County, except for a few which went into a brood pond at Chino. The bluegill are expected to reproduce this year.

It is hoped that the new strain will help improve growth characteristics of bluegill, the principal warm-water game fish available to California anglers during the summer, and solve the problem of deteriorating bluegill fisheries in waters with largemouth bass and threadfin shad.

Until now all bluegill present in California waters were descendants of a northern strain of fish introduced from Illinois in the 1890s. This strain, however, has shown tendencies to overpopulate and become stunted and therefore less desirable to anglers.

Fred Carter hit a 25-foot jump shot at the buzzer Tuesday night to give the Philadelphia 76ers a 109-108 National Basketball Association victory over Golden State.

The defending NBA champion Warriors had taken a 108-107 lead on Charles Dudley's twn free shots with three seconds left.

Billy Cunningham threw the ball in to Carter, who dribbled once, wheeled and fired. George McGinnis had put the 76ers on top with 39 seconds left on his one-handed shot near the key.

The contest was close throughout, although the Warriors led most of the way. Golden State took a 27-24 first quarter margin and the 76ers rallied to take the lead in the second quarter, but the

Less than two months from now Foreman is tentatively scheduled to fight again, facing Ron Lyle in Las Vegas. It will be George's first real test since the Ali loss. Is Lyle the best man available to base a serious come-

Tomorrow night may be too soon to determine whether Foreman can regain his mastery of the heavyweights, and the favor of the fighting public.

You know he's trying though. The only action photograph pinned to the walls of his gym is a near life-size blow up of the Mexico City flag-waving. That is George Foreman's reminder.

Conjoined twins present mystery

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) - A "near-epidemic" of the birth of Siamese-or conjoined—twins has presented doctors in southern Africa with a baffling medical mys-

Over the last 18 months there have been 12 recorded sets of Siamese twins born in South Africa, Rhodesia and Southwest Africa.

The latest pair was born in Durban earlier this month. None survived more than a

Such births usually occur so rarely that the number recorded is being termed "statistically and genetically unique" and has doctors wondering whether some unknown but widespread environmental agent may be playing a role in the outbreak. Estimates of incidence of conjoined births vary, with

Expert says he believes in monster

LONDON (AP) - A leading British naturalist says he is convinced by an American research team's photographs that the fabled Loch Ness monster is a living prehistoric reptile - or rather a family of "The most important thing shown is the flipper of the animal, which I find very convincing," said Sir Peter Scott. an organizer of a symposium at which closely guarded photographs taken by a team led by American Robert Rines will be shown to the world on Dec. 10.

'There is no known whale or dolphin which has a flipper this shape," Scott told a British Press Association reporter at his home in Gloucestershire. "But there are flippers of the same general shape in the fossil records of prehistoric reptiles.'

Rines, a patent lawyer and dean of Franklin Pierce Law Center in Concord, N.H., was quoted in a copyright story in the Boston Globe as saying that his Boston-based research group had taken pictures proving the existence of the monster.

'Eat lamb' doesn't aid lamb prices

SACRAMENTO (AP) -California food growers pump $25 million a year into generic advertising like "eat lamb" and "drink milk" but it apparently has no effect on the prices they receive, says an

The money is spent through 25 of the state's 37 "marketing orders.'

Marketing orders date back to the 1930s when price cutting was putting many small growers out of business. The stated purpose of marketing orders was to establish conditions that would be fair to both producers and

Dr. Lawrence Shepard, assistant professor of agricultural economics at the University of California at Davis, described Thursday a study of 14 products covered by marketing orders.

He said that when the advertising of the 14 products was increased 10 per cent, the farm level prices increased on only two — fresh peaches, 2.6 per cent, and turkeys, 1.2 per cent.

Prices actually dropped for two, dried figs and bartlett

He recommended that growers put their money instead into such things as promotion of processing firms, increased production research, and nutrition education programs in schools.

"In the agricultural marketing literature there has always been a faction which has been highly suspicious of advertising," Shepard told a panel of the state Department of Food and Agriculture.

"The evidence supports them and mandates the conclusion that much generic advertising expenditure is ineffective," he said. The trouble is, growers can-not control supply, Shepard

"If the price increases just a little bit, farmers will start growing that product. They will increase supply and force prices down," he said.

The purpose of the hearing was to develop policy guidelines for the advertising programs.

one study finding 1 in 60,000 births. A World Health Organization survey of 24 countries. published in 1966, turned up only 2 among 421,781 births.

Among 20,000 births at Cape Town hospitals in 1974, however, there were three sets, far above what would be expected.

Prof. Peter Beighton is studying the phenomenon with colleagues at the University of Cape Town's medical school.

"We're accumulating data on the births but cannot determine what's causing them. The number involved, however, suggests an incidence of near-epidemic proportions. he said

Dr. Matilde Nelson, one of Beighton's colleagues, sur-mises the births could be due to a drug similar to thalidomide — the tranquilizer used in the late 1950s which caused serious deformities to children born to women who used it during pregnancy.

Another theory the doctors put forward on the most tentative basis related to an influenza epidemic in southern Africa in 1973.

Conjoined twins have been known as "Siamese" since Chang and Eng Bunker were born in Maklong, Thailand (then Siam), on May 11, 1811.

Amador auditorium improvement under way

Work is underway on improved stage lighting and rigging at the Amador Valley High School auditorium as the result of a bid award to Stagecraft Industries, Inc. at last week's Amador school board meeting.

The project was fostered by concerted community effort spearheaded by the Pleasanton Junior Women's Club, which presented a check for $14,845.29.

When completed, the new equipment will substantially embellish productions at the venerable high school auditorium

Amador district trustees have also received a progress report from the Physical Education Elective committee.
Panel members have concluded that "going full speed into an elective program all at one time has serious draw-

As reported previously, a vast majority of students at all three district schools would take PE if it were made an elective at the 11th and 12th grades.

The count was 88-22 at Amador, 209-51 at Dublin and 91-24 at Foothill.

The same survey groups were asked, "Can PE be replaced by athletics?", and the response was 62-48 "yes" at Amador, 143-108 "yes" at Dublin and 67-46 "yes" at oothill.

Asked what they would approximately six additional classes.

take in place of PE, the responses were wide-ranging Golf, tennis and volleyball were rated 1-2-3 at Amador; softball, tennis and basketball at Dublin; softball, tennis and archery at Foothill.

The report notes that "up to 20 per cent of the junior and seniors might elect to take something else other than P.E. at least when the elective program would first go into effect." This would mean at Amador approximately 184 approximately six additional classes.

It also could mean, according to the progress report, that more students might elect to take a five-period day. If additional students were to sign up for certain classes as art and industrial arts at Amador, the facilities would be severely strained.

Committee members also concluded that, (1) The concept of elective PE while of value has many implications for other departments in staffing, budgeting and class size, (2) It would be most difficult to move into a total elective program an any one time and that to do anything for the spring semester would be chaotic. Some type of a phase-in program seemed the most desirable, (3) The Graduation Task Force's PE committee has a need to develop what they feel a high school

PE program should include.
Next meeting of the PE Elective committee, which includes students, parents and teachers from throughout the district, is scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 11, at the District Educational Center

Murray hopefuls have time left

DUBLIN — Murray School District residents interested in the vacancy recently created on the Murray board still have a few more weeks in which to signify their intention of seeking the seat.

Murray trustees last week indicated they would wait until the March elections rather than appoint a replacement for Joanne Bascom now.

Mrs. Bascom's term runs through March of 1977. So far, four persons have told the board they wish to be considered for the position.

They include Dawn Rutter,
Harrietta Dahlin, Art Laur-

sen and Eugene Hinton.

Laursen is a former board member while Rutter and Hinton are previous unsuccessful candidates. It was incorrectly reported Sunday that Rutter was a former board member.

BART begins special holiday service November 28.

BART's night service is scheduled to begin on the 1st of January 1976. But, as in past years, holiday "night trains" will start running the day after Thanksgiving to accommodate shoppers, theatergoers and sports fans.

Night trains will run at 20 minute intervals instead of the current 12 minute intervals, in order to efficiently serve the expected demand.

order to efficiently serve the expected demand.

A two line "X" service will be used with passengers transferring from one line to the other at MacArthur or 12th Street Stations. (See map

The transition from current service to the new holiday "night train" service will occur during the 6 to 8 pm. period.

The table below shows the scheduled times of the last trains from each station, and a 'last train' schedule is prominently displayed in all BART stations. Make sure you are on the platform in plenty of time.

This special holiday service ends December 30. On December 31, BART will return to the current 6 am. to 8 pm. schedule in order to qualify for the federal funding which makes night service possible. However, on January 1, 1976, night service will commence on a permanent basis.

If you have any questions concerning the new night service or connecting buses, call the BART Phone Information Center.
